Novetta team,

I'm writing to express interest in the open Software Developer position that is available at your company .

Over the past seven years, I've defined and executed strategic initiatives to grow businesses. While my roles have shifted over time, at the core I have always been driven by a passion for developing products that deliver exceptional experiences.

My background allows me to approach development from a business perspective, with a constant focus on the end-user experience. Seven years ago I had the opportunity to be a part of one of the biggest international dance events, BellyDance China. Here I gained skills in communication, marketing and sales, which inevitably helped propel my career managing one of the most profitable bars in Austin. Having the responsibilities of increasing profits, decreasing overhead and managing staff while always working towards exceptional customer satisfaction is what (strangely enough) drove me into a career of development.

Being challenged with new and creative problems is something I've always been drawn to. My passion for product development drove me to develop skills which enable me to build my own experiences from the ground-up.

As a web developer, I have built applications using React, React Native, Redux and Node. Beyond that, I have worked extensively with and built out RESTful API's and have worked on creative solutions to common issues such as cross-compatibility and scalability. Above all, though, my goal throughout learning and executing code has always been to be the developer who others want to work with. This serves as a motivator to keep myself in a constant state of improvement.

I appreciate your consideration and look forward to hearing from you.
